A805	France	1801-1900	Human skin, with tattooed pierced heart, probably French, 19th century. Tattoo - crude and asymmetric heart shot through with an arrow and crowned with a crucifix, outlined in black. A pale white chalky film obscures the design somewhat. Skin - yellow-white, with a white residue on the surface, possibly chemical. Irregular circle shaped sample, fine pores and some mid-brown hairs visible. A circular hole approximately 5mm across is visible near the right edge of the tattoo.
A806	France	1801-1900	Human skin, tattooed with male figure, French, 19th century. Tattoo - the tattooed figure outlined in black is virtually undecipherable due to the poor condition of the skin. Skin - orange-umber colouration, a large area of the skin is effected by a white residue which obscures most of the tattoo beneath. Rectangular shape, surgically cut straight edges, the skin is damaged with a wide tear at one end and another smaller tear, with some wrinkling, towards the centre of the sample.

A800	France	1830-1900	Human skin, tattooed with monogram, French, 1830-1900. Tattoo - black outlined symbol resembling a 'Z' within a crescent arc. Heavy application of single line formed by dots, amateur execution. Skin - Yellow colouration, translucent and parchment-like. A number of small, white bubble-like patches are present on the skin, possibly fungal growth. Asymmetric shape, thin cross-section.
A807	France	1830-1900	Human skin, tattooed with flower, French, 1830-1900. Tattoo - the design is a large, 3 petaled flower with stem and leaves, executed in black ink with distinct, thick black dots forming the outline. The centre of the petals and leaves are decorated with numerous smaller black spots. Hand made, amateur workmanship. Skin - yellow- white colouration, white possibly a surface residue, rectangular shape cut to frame design.
A810	France	1830-1900	Human skin, tattooed with inscription, French, 1830-1900
A816	France	1830-1900	Human skin, tattooed with clothed female bust, French, 1830-1900

A771	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with nude female figure, French, 1850-1900
A774	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with heart, with inscription surmounted by cross, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - black ink applied in large dots, most likely using a medium-size needle bundle, applied by hand, amateur execution. Inscription appears to be two letters, one an 'A', the other is illegible. Skin - very thin, yellow-beige colouration, asymmetric shape.

A775	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with badge of crescent and star, with inscription, French, 1850-1900
A776	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with lion, French, 1850-1900
A777	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with pierced heart and inscription, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - amateur, hand drawn design in black ink, heavily outlined. The inscription reads 'HENRI', next to the heart and broken arrow head. Skin - pale white-yellow colouration, rectangular shape, cut to mirror tattoo design.
A778	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with male and female figures copulating, French, 1850-1900
A781	France	1850-1900	Human skin, with tattooed inscription, probably French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - fancy, handwriting-style lettering, degradation to skin surface makes this difficult to read, but appears to spell a name, perhaps 'Fatherma', fairly well executed in black, with another indistinct symbol below. Skin - yellow-white, with evidence of degrading white residue on surface layer, possibly chemical. Roughly rectangular in shape, cut to frame the tattoo, thin cross-section.
A785	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with nude female figure, probably French, 1850-1900
A78689	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with various motifs, French, 1850-1900
A787	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with female head and inscription, French, 1850-1900
A788	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with inscription, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - black outlined capital lettering which reads 'ARSENE MOINE', one word above another, separated by an indistinct shape/symbol. Extensive feathering due either to age or poor application technique; amateur execution, letters irregular. Skin - yellow-brown colouration, parchment-like appearance, roughly square shape, thin cross-section.
A789	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with floral wreath, French, 1850-1900
A790	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with female bust holding flowers, with inscription, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - design is an amateur, hand-applied female bust in profile, below which the French girl's name 'cEZARINE' is spelled in inconsistent sizing and case. Skin - parchment-like appearance, almost translucent in places, orange colouration in thicker areas. A dry, scurfy residue is present at the edges with white-ish and sienna discolouration. Roughly square in shape, part of the tattoo is missing where the skin has been cut.
A792	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with flowers, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - single flower executed in black, with a stem and four leaves, evidence of hand applied dotting technique, amateur application. Skin - inconsistent shape, brown-yellow colouration, very thin cross-section.
A793	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with clothed female figure, holding flowers above initial, French, 1850-1900
A795	France	1850-1900	Human tattooed skin, with inscription "Je Jure D'Aimer Henri Faure Jusqua La Mort", French, 1850-1920. Tattoo - heavy black text, fancy font, carefully tattooed with clear edges despite some age fading. Possibly hand applied, though with skill. Skin - rectangular shape, surgically cut straight edges, very thin cross-section, parchment-like, beige-yellow colouration. Some damage at top right hand edge (an elliptical hole).
A798	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with pierced heart, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo -black outlined heart, pierced with arrow and crowned, very faded with extensive feathering. Skin - Yellow/cream-brown colouration, especially at edges, pores also a discoloured brown, perhaps chemical. Roughly square shape, thin cross-section, some dark hairs visible.

A799	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with fouled anchor, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - black outlined fouled anchor (traditionally the insignia of the Chief Petty Officer), hand applied by single dot technique, clearly apparent in some areas where the dots don't join up to form a line. Amateur design and execution. Skin - Yellow-cream colouration with browner edges, very thin cross-section, triangular shape cut to frame the tattoo design.
A801	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with crescent moon and stars, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - very indistinct due to condition of the skin, on close observation the ink in the dermis appears to be flaking/peeling away, suggesting that the surface layers of the skin are decaying. Black ink design, the crescent moon in the centre is the only clearly legible part of the tattoo. Skin - dark brown surface which appears to have rubbed away - some evidence of surface scratching, possibly deliberate. Yellowish-white colouration beneath, roughly circular shape.
A803	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with two playing cards, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - two playing cards executed in black, with bottom points meeting along one edge, a black spade and a heart in the centre of each card respectively. Design is crude and amateur, showing some feathering and potential beading. Skin - dirty white-greyish and brown at the edges, very thin cross-section, roughly oblong in shape.
A804	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with yacht, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - crude design of a ship with sails, dot technique used to outline in black, with a further 14 parallel dots decorating the sails. Skin - orange-umber colour, visible pores with some pale body hairs. Rectangular shape, thin cross-section.
A808	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with flower, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - black outlined and partially coloured flower or 4 leaf clover, areas of the tattoo are indecipherable or worn away. Skin - dark brown-sepia colouration, with some easily visible surface growth, possibly fungal or bacterial, forming small clusters of white-ish excrescences. Roughly square sample, uneven cross-section, almost transparent in some areas, fleshy in others.
A809	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with inscription, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - the design is completely obscured by a yellow-white residue, possibly chemical. On holding the sample up to light the inscribed word 'HENRI' becomes visible in bold black letters, with another unrecognisable symbol beneath. Skin - leathery appearance, small square shape, yellow-white colouration with dark brown edges.
A812	France	1850-1900	Human skin, tattooed with anchor in wreath, above initials, French, 1850-1900. Tattoo - fouled anchor with wreath and initial 'HA' beneath, finely outlined. Execution appears amateurish, showing inconsistency of line and shadows in some areas, with some feathering and beading evident, but shows confident smooth linework in others - possibly made using an early machine, which would date the tattoo as made no earlier than 1890. Skin - colouration varies from orange-yellow to brown, with surface undulations. There is also an unknown sandy-textured dark brown substance adhering to areas of the skin and obscuring parts of the tattoo mark.
